

Speech-Language Pathologist Description

Morgan Autism Center (in cooperation with Something to Say AAC, Language and Speech Therapy) is looking for Speech-Language Pathologists (SLPs) to join our team! We are interviewing seasoned SLPs and clinical fellows for full or part-time positions for the 22-23 school year.

Morgan Autism Center prioritizes communication within a positive, supportive, environment. We offer extremely low caseloads with excellent opportunities for collaboration with professionals and families to build relationships and really make a difference in the lives of our students (16-20 students 6-22 years of age). In your role, you will work alongside a multifaceted team of SLPs, teachers, occupational therapists, and related service providers.

Our SLP team is led by SLPs experienced with augmentative alternative communication (AAC), and assistive technology (AT). As part of the SLP team, you will experience unrivaled opportunities for mentorship in AAC and AT. As a valued member of a multidisciplinary team, your role does not involve case management but allows you to focus on your skills and knowledge in speech and language.

- Competitive Salary (based on experience)
- Medical Benefits
- ASHA and California License Dues
